THE CORPORATION TRUST COMPANY AND AFFILIATED COMPANIES

The policy of The Corporation Trust Company in all matters relating to the incorporation, qualification, and statutory representation and maintenance of corporations, is to deal with members of the bar, exclusively.

Two important recent decisions on the right of a state to tax the intangibles of a foreign corporation are found in Wheelock Lovejoy & Co., Inc. v. Gill, decided by the Illinois Supreme Court, holding that the intangibles of a foreign corporation may not be taxed in Illinois because no statutory authority could be found to warrant such a tax, (page 374 of this issue), and Smith, Collector of Revenue of Green County, et al. v. The Ajax Pipe Line Company, decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, to the effect that deposits in a New York bank, belonging to a Delaware corporation with its only office in Missouri, may be taxed in Missouri as having a situs there (page 375).

North Dakota has adopted a new Foreign Corporation Act, (Laws of 1937, House Bill No. 217). Under it, licenses of foreign corporations in North Dakota will expire March 1, 1938. After July 1, 1937, and prior to March 1, 1938, each foreign corporation licensed in North Dakota prior to July 1, 1937, will be required to obtain a certificate of authority for the privilege of doing business in the state subsequent to March 1, 1938.

They Studied Law

More than one novelist, historian or poet has written the works upon which his fame rests with a background of knowledge acquired through the study of law. For instance:

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON studied law and was called to the bar before he wrote Treasure Island and The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. CHARLES DICKENS, through his work as a court stenographer, obtained an insight into the routine of the courts, and from the knowledge thus gained he reported in entertaining form such cases as Bardell against Pickwick[1] and Jarndyce and Jarndyce.[2] JULES VERNE, who wrote Around the World in Eighty Days, was at one time a law student in France. WASHINGTON IRVING, who gave us Rip Van Winkle and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, once had an office as an attorney-at-law at 3 Wall Street, New York City. GENERAL LEW WALLACE, who wrote Ben Hur, was long a member of the Indiana bar.

THOMAS CARLYLE, among the historians, studied law, as did JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY and JOHN FISKE. Another historian, THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY, was called to the bar before he turned to writing.

There are poets who wrote briefs before they shaped the poetic phrases by which they are remembered.

SIR WALTER SCOTT practiced as an advocate for a time and then withdrew from the courts to devote his attention to his poetry and novels. THOMAS GRAY, who wrote Elegy in a Country Churchyard, was another poet who prepared himself for the practice of law. WILLIAM COWPER was called to the bar and THOMAS CHATTERTON was for a time a lawyer's clerk. JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL was admitted to the Massachusetts bar, although comparatively little of his life was devoted to practicing law. WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT was also a member of the Massachusetts bar and practiced for several years before he turned to literary and journalistic work.

No doubt there are others who relinquished the law to achieve fame as poets. They differ from SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, who gained a gold medal for some verses on Milton before he was twenty and, when entering the Middle Temple to take up the study of law, wrote a poem entitled "The Lawyer's Farewell to his Muse."

Domestic Corporations

May a director, who is also a salaried employe, his salary, however, being unpaid, sue his fellow-directors under their statutory liability as directors to employes for unpaid wages? By statute, (Sec. 113, Companies Act, R.S.C. 1927, c. 27, now 1934 (Can.), c. 33), directors of corporations were made jointly and severally liable to "clerks, labourers, servants and apprentices thereof, for all debts not exceeding six months' wages due for service performed for the company whilst they are such directors." Plaintiff, after his election as a director, had been appointed by the directors as a salaried field manager. He brought suit against his fellow-directors to recover his unpaid salary under the statute mentioned. The Alberta Supreme Court, Appellate Division, reaching the conclusion that the action could not be maintained, said that it seems clear "that Parliament did not intend to make each member of a Board of Directors of a Dominion company jointly and severally liable to each other for work which a director performs as a 'clerk, labourer, servant or apprentice' of the company. The individual employed cannot split himself in two and say now I am a director and now I am a clerk or servant, or labourer." Mulligan v. Lancaster et al., (1937) 1 D.L.R. 414. I. W. McArdle, for appellants. D. G. MacKenzie, K.C., for respondent.

Where a corporation's statutory right to levy an assessment on stock is questioned by a stockholder, which law governs—that in effect at time of the issuance of his stock or that in effect at the time of the assessment? At the time plaintiff's stock was issued, the Civil Code permitted directors to levy assessments upon stock. Later, and prior to a levy by the defendant corporation, in connection with which a recovery is sought, the Code was amended to permit such a levy only if the articles of incorporation expressly conferred such authority. The levy was made before the articles of defendant had been so amended. The corporation contended that the provisions in force at the time of the issuance of the stock governed, and that therefore the levy was valid. The Supreme Court of California, however, upheld a judgment permitting a recovery by plaintiff stockholder of the amount of the assessment made, in view of the fact that the California Constitution, Article XII, contained provision for the alteration or repeal of laws concerning corporations. The court ruled that the law in force at the time the levy was made governed. As the directors were at that time without authority to levy assessments under the articles of incorporation, a recovery was allowed. Schroeter, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of the United States Guaranty Corporation v. Bartlett Syndicate Building Corporation, Ltd., 63 P. (2d).824. Root, Bettin & Painter, Bettin, Painter & Wait and Conant Wait of Los Angeles, for appellant. Geo. W. Fenimore, Haight, Mathes & Sheppard, Mathes & Sheppard and Robert A. Cushman of Los Angeles, for respondent. Chickering & Gregory and Lalor Crimmins of San Francisco, amici curiae.

Illinois.

"There is no such thing as a vested right to a particular remedy." Plaintiff Illinois corporation, which had been dissolved as a result of its failure to file its Illinois annual reports, to pay its franchise tax, and to maintain a place of business or principal office in Illinois, sought in this action in the United States District Court, N. D., West Virginia, to recover certain funds which had been held in escrow for it by defendant bank. Prior to the institution of this suit, however, the corporation laws of Illinois had been revised through the enactment of the Business Corporation Act (Laws 1933, p. 308), which resulted in an elimination of a provision of the prior law which gave an Illinois corporation the right and power to collect debts due it and to maintain suits in its corporate name for a period of two years after the date of dissolution. This change in the law the court held to constitute "a change in the corporation's remedy only and not a change in any vested or inchoate substantive right of such corporation," and it added: "There is no such thing as a vested right to a particular remedy." The remedy of a suit for the recovery of the funds held in escrow not being available to plaintiff at the time this action was begun, its suit was ordered dismissed. Billiard Table Mfg. Corporation v. First-Tyler Bank & Trust Co., 16 F. Supp. 990. Nesbitt & Nesbitt of Wheeling, W. Va., for plaintiff. Handlan, Garden & Matthews of Wheeling, and Henry P. Snyder of Sistersville, W. Va., for defendant.

Acceptance by corporation of benefits under one of two related pre-incorporation promoter's contracts, held to charge it with liabilities under the other. Appellant sued for 2,500 shares of the capital stock of appellee company, or its value, in return for services rendered on behalf of the company prior to its incorporation in securing the transfer to it, after incorporation, of certain real property. The services were rendered to one of the organizers of the company who had agreed in writing, after the organization of the corporation, to assign the stock to appellant. The Court of Appeals of Kentucky referred to the rule that usually it is held that promoters have no power to bind a corporation by a contract made for it before it has come into existence, but found that in this case two pre-corporate contracts had been made for the company, one for the purchase of the property and the other to pay appellant for finding it and arranging for its purchase. It held that both were parts of the activities of the promoters, and the corporation, having obtained the benefit of one contract, must accept the liability of the other.

A recovery was therefore allowed. Lowther v. Blair Distilling Co., 99 S. W. (2d) 204. C. E. Schindler and H. S. Horen of Louisville and P. K. McElroy of Lebanon, for appellant. W. H. Spragens and C. C. Boldrick of Lebanon, for appellee.

New York.

If a judgment is recovered against a director in a state court for violation of Section 15, Stock Corporation Law, it is not a dischargeable debt under Section 17(a)(4) of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, has ruled that where a judgment, which was obtained by a creditor of a corporation under Section 15 of the New York Stock Corporation Law, indicates that the bankrupt, an individual, as a director of the corporation, brought about certain unlawful payments of the corporate funds when he knew the corporation was insolvent and that the interests of creditors would be sacrificed, there was a "misappropriation" of corporate funds within the meaning of Section 17(a)(4) of the Bankruptcy Act. The court holds that the resulting indebtedness to the corporation arising from the "misappropriation" is not a dischargeable debt. In the matter of Barnett Bernard, bankrupt-appellant; New York Credit Men's Association, creditor-appellee, United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, February 1, 1937. Subscription to stock, induced by fraudulent representations, may be rescinded if subscriber is not estopped by laches, acceptance of benefits or intervening rights of third parties. Defendant had subscribed for stock of a corporation later adjudged a bankrupt, of which plaintiff is trustee, suing defendant to foreclose a lien upon the latter's certificates. The trial court had found that defendant had been induced to subscribe for the stock through the misrepresentations of an agent of the company, made at a time when the corporation was insolvent. The Supreme Court of Oregon, in affirming the decision of the lower court, pointed out that such contracts, induced by fraud, although voidable, are valid and binding until the defrauded party elects to treat them as void, and may be rescinded if, at the time of the rescission, the corporation was a going concern and he had been diligent in discovering the fraud and was not estopped by laches, acceptance of benefits, or the intervening rights of third parties. Gordon v. Ralston, 62 P. (2d) 1328. E. R. Ringo of La Grande (Coan & Rosenberg of Portland, on the brief, for appellant. John S. Hodgin of La Grande, for respondent.

Rhode Island.

The Supreme Court of Rhode Island draws the line between statutory and equitable relief. Two sections of the statutes permitted proceedings for the appointment of receivers of corporations, one by petition and the other by a bill in equity. The proceedings by petition were limited by statute as to the relief which might be granted, while the full powers of a court of equity as to relief were available where the proceedings were initiated by a bill in equity. The Supreme Court of Rhode Island rules that where the petition method was adopted, the petitioner can be allowed no relief beyond that outlined by the statute, and the broader relief obtainable under a proceeding by a bill in equity is not available under the former method. Petrovics v. The King Holdings, Inc., 188 A. 514. Edward Winsor, Henry B. Gardner, Jr., and Edwards & Angell, of Providence, for petitioner. Peter L. Cannon of Providence, for respondent King. Corporations are entitled to jury trial on issue of bad faith of stockholder seeking inspection of corporate records. In an action in the lower court, a stockholder had proceeded against his corporation and its affiliated companies in an endeavor to inspect their books and records. The corporations alleged that the stockholder did not act in good faith and asked a jury trial on this issue and the case had been placed on the jury docket. The judge of the lower court had then issued an interlocutory order compelling the corporations to permit the stockholder to inspect their records. This the corporations now seek to have set aside in the present action in the Civil Court of Appeals of Texas, Dallas, in which the judge of the lower court is the principal defendant. This court holds the companies entitled to a jury trial on the issue of bad faith, and indicates that the action of the lower court, in attempting to allow the inspection prior to the jury trial, was improper. Guaranty Old Line Life Co. et al. v. McCallum, Judge, et al., 97 S. W. (2d) 966. Chas. Romick of Dallas, for relators. John Davis of Dallas, for respondents.

Foreign Corporations

Arizona.

Interference in internal management of affairs of a corporation is not within the jurisdiction of courts of a foreign state. A case in which the Supreme Court of Arizona refused to interfere with the internal affairs of a corporation organized under the laws of another state is Van Denburgh v. Tungsten Reef Mines Co. et al., 63 P. (2d) 647. There, the validity of the election of a member of a corporation's board of directors, occurring in California, was regarded as a matter affecting only the internal management of the company. Arizona was held not to have jurisdiction in an equitable action for fraudulent conversion or dissipation of the assets of the corporation by its directors, although the property involved was in Arizona, where none of the directors were ever personally served within the state and none had appeared to answer the suit. The fact that the foreign corporation was authorized to do business in Arizona and had designated a statutory agent, did not, of itself, result in conferring jurisdiction on the Arizona courts under the circumstances. Robert Young and Oscar S. Elvrum of Los Angeles, Calif., and Chalmers, Fennemore & Nairn of Phoenix, for appellant. Kelby, Lawson & Garroway of Los Angeles, Cal., and Ellinwood & Ross of Phoenix, for appellee Tungsten Reef Mines Co. Ernest C. Griffith of Los Angeles, Cal., for appellee John J. Seeman.

California.

Service of process ordered set aside, where made upon California statutory agent of a foreign corporation in action involving tort committed in another state in no way connected with California business. The question was whether plaintiff's service of summons in an action in the United States District Court, Southern District, California, Central Division, might, under the California law, be served upon the California statutory agent of defendant foreign corporation in a suit arising upon a statutory tort committed in another state, the alleged tort being in no way connected with business transacted by the defendant in California. The court, after quoting the pertinent portion of section 405 of the California Civil Code, requiring a foreign corporation to designate a statutory agent for the service of process, and noting that there was no decision of the highest California court authorizing the service of process questioned, construed the requirement so as to exclude from their operation suits founded upon causes of action not arising in the business done by such a foreign corporation in California. Defendant was therefore held entitled to an order quashing the service of summons. Miner v. United Air Lines Transport Corporation, 16 F. Supp. 930. Randall & Bartlett of Los Angeles, Cal., for plaintiff. Jesse H. Steinhart and John J. Goldberg of San Francisco, Cal., for defendant.

Iowa.

Iowa insurance company held not doing business under Missouri statutes so as to render default judgment obtained in a Missouri court enforceable in Iowa. Plaintiff had secured a judgment by default in a Missouri court against defendant Iowa insurance corporation, which was not licensed to do business in Missouri. This judgment it sought in this action to enforce in Iowa. Defendant resists this on the ground that valid service was not had in Missouri in initiating the suit in that state. Service had been made under section 5897, R. S., Missouri, 1929, authorizing service upon an unlicensed foreign insurance company by delivery of summons and complaint to any person "who adjusts or settles a loss or pays the same for such insurance corporation, or in any manner aids or assists in doing either." Service had been made upon a Missouri physician, who, while receiving from defendant no annual or fixed retainer, had for four or five years prior to the service acted for defendant in making physical examinations of persons in Missouri having claims under defendant's policies. Three such persons testified that settlements were discussed and that the physician made recommendations to defendant, the claims being later satisfied accordingly by payment to claimants, no other persons being involved in the settlements. The Iowa Supreme Court, three members dissenting, affirms a judgment of the lower Iowa court for defendant upon a directed verdict, on the ground that this evidence did not warrant a holding that, at the time of the service upon the physician, defendant was present in Missouri, doing business there. The court remarked that "if defendant on occasions voluntarily entered Missouri, by doing business of a temporary character through an agent, its right to depart from that state by concluding the business was not impeded by any duty owing plaintiff. There seems to be no foundation on which to rest a holding that defendant was under obligation to plaintiff to remain in the state for the purpose of service of process after the three alleged instances of doing business, not associated with plaintiff or her decedent, had terminated." The dissenting opinion took the view that the defendant was doing business in Missouri and that the physician was a proper person upon whom service of process might have been made under the terms of the Missouri statute. *Saunders v. New York.

Foreign newspaper corporation publishing advertising solicited independently by New York advertising agency held not doing business in New York. Defendant was an Oklahoma newspaper corporation engaging directly in no activities in New York. Service of summons was made upon defendant by serving a New York corporation which was an advertising agency soliciting advertising for various newspapers, of which defendant was one. There was no direct contact between the advertisers and the defendant, the agency billing the advertisers on its own account and paying defendant for the newspaper space it used. The United States District Court, Southern District of New York, reaches the conclusion that defendant had not extended its activities to New York to such a

LET THE SHOEMAKER STICK TO HIS LAST!

(—and the Sales Manager to his Sales!)

WOULD it be good business to choose an accountant to go out to close a sale? Or a salesman to make out a tax report?

Inefficient, to say the least of it.

Yet, when you come to think about it, not much more inefficient than choosing a salesman, or a service manager, or a branch store-keeper, to handle a company's corporate representation.

On a company's corporate agent there may be served, at any moment, process which not only calls for appearance in court upon a certain date, but—buried for the inexperienced eye in its paragraphs of formalities and technicalities—commands the corporation to desist from certain acts in the meantime; or process which summons for appearance upon a certain day and then further on demands a preliminary appearance upon a different and much earlier day; process which for the company's full protection requires notification not only to the company's attorney but immediately to some representative in the state, or perhaps to the liability insurance company; or process of such nature that only telegraph or long distance telephone can provide the prompt attention it needs.

Taxation

Federal.

A Federal documentary stamp tax is due where stock is issued, at the instance of the one who is entitled to receive the stock, in the name of a nominee who receives no beneficial interest therein. "These three cases," said Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court of the United States, "present, in the main, the same question: When, at the instance of one entitled to receive stock, the certificates therefor are, at his request and for his convenience, issued by the corporation in the name of a nominee who receives no beneficial interest therein, does the transaction involve a transfer by the beneficial owner requiring a documentary stamp pursuant to Section 800, Schedule A-3, of the Revenue Act of 1926, February 26, 1926, c. 27, Title VIII, 44 Stat. 99, 101?" The statute making taxable rights "to receive" shares or certificates, the transaction was held a taxable one, the court saying: "The tax is exacted because the taxpayer transferred 'the right to receive' the certificate." "The legality of the issuance of the stock in the names of the nominees rests on the fact that the taxpayers authorized such issuance and granted their nominees the right to receive the stocks entered in their names. The grant of that authority is a transfer of the 'right to receive' within the meaning of the Act; and we are not to look beyond the Act for further criteria of taxability." Founders General Corporation v. Hoey, Collector of Internal Revenue, United States v. A. B. Leach & Co. Inc. and *United States v. Automatic Washer Company, Docket Nos. 398, 331 and 330, Supreme Court of the United States, March 1, 1937. Royal E. T. Riggs, for the petitioner. Illinois.

May the intangibles of a foreign corporation be taxed in Illinois? The Supreme Court of Illinois answers this question with an emphatic negative, by granting an injunction against the collection of a tax by the assessor of Cook County based upon an assessment against the credits and "franchise" of appellant corporation, consisting, as stipulated by the assessor, "of that portion of the trade-marks, copyrights, patents, good will, capitalized earning power and franchise allocated to the Chicago office on the basis of the proportion of business produced by the use of said intangibles at the Chicago office of the complainant corporation." The court stressed the fact that there was no statutory authority for the levy, saying: "No specific statutory provision can be found which would warrant the imposition of such a tax, nor is any language used in the Revenue Act by which such authority can be fairly implied." "The mere fact that credits arose in Illinois is not a basis for taxation." "It is our opinion that the assessor of Cook county acted without statutory authority in assessing a tax upon the credits, franchise or other intangible property of the appellant corporation." *Wheelock Lovejoy & Co., Inc. v. Gill, Illinois Supreme Court, February 12, 1937. CCH Court Decisions Reporting Service Requisition No. 171891.

Missouri.

May deposits in a New York bank, belonging to a Delaware corporation with its only office in Missouri, be taxed in Missouri as having a situs there? That such deposits have a situs in Missouri and are taxable there under the Missouri statutes, is the holding of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, on the authority of Wheeling Steel Corporation v. Fox, 56 S. Ct. 773, 298 U. S. 193, (The Corporation Journal, June, 1936, page 210), the court finding little to distinguish the case before it from the case cited. *Smith, Collector of Revenue of Greene County, et al. v. The Ajax Pipe Line Company, United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, January 22, 1937. Commerce Clearing House Court Decisions Reporting Service Requisition No. 170890. Nat W. Oklahoma.

Long-time indebtedness may be deducted in determining value of capital stock for annual license tax purposes. The Oklahoma Tax Commission contended that certain long-time bonds and indebtedness of plaintiff corporation, maturing more than two years from the date of issue, must be added to the value of plaintiff's capital stock employed in business in Oklahoma in determining plaintiff's annual license fee, while the company took the position that the bonded indebtedness should be deducted as liabilities from the capital used in Oklahoma. There was no question of apportioning the value of the capital stock, because all of the corporation's business was done in Oklahoma and all of its property was located there.

The statutes provided that the tax was to be measured by the value of the capital stock employed in the state. A 1933 amendment (Chapter 155, Session Laws of 1933), contained the following provision: "For the purpose of this act, bonds, notes, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness maturing two years or more after issuance, shall be treated as capital, and included as a part of the capital stock employed in the business." The Oklahoma Supreme Court, after considering the various provisions of the statute, found that the fee was to be based on "the value" of the capital stock and that the value of the capital stock was to be determined from the books of the corporation. The court said that "book value," as defined in a majority of the available decisions, is the market value of the assets of the corporation, less its liabilities and, in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, the corporation in arriving at the book value, may deduct from the market value of its assets the sum of its liabilities, including long-time indebtedness. Referring to the 1933 amendment quoted above the court continued: "The particular provision of the statute here under consideration is therefore rendered ineffective for any purpose in arriving at the value upon which the tax is computed, and the result is the same as if the provision had been omitted." Plaintiff's contention was therefore upheld. *Southwestern Light & Power Co. v. Oklahoma Tax Commission et al., 62 P. (2d) 637. Leslie Pain and S. I. McElhoes of Chickasha, for plaintiff. C. D. Oregon.

Delinquency in payment of real property taxes by a corporation is no bar to its maintenance of suit. In an action in the Oregon Supreme Court, the defendant contended that because the plaintiff corporation was delinquent in the payment of its real property taxes, it should not be permitted to maintain any action within the state. The court found, however, that the statute upon which defendant relied, (Sec. 25-239, Oregon Laws), related only to taxes and fees imposed as incidental to the conduct of corporation business and the exercise of corporate franchises, and not to general property taxes. *East Side Mill and Lumber Company et al. v. Dwyer Logging Company, 64 P. (2d) 89. Leo J. Hanley (Cookingham & Hanley, Glen McCarty, and Ridgeway, Johnson & Kendall, on the brief), of Portland, for appellant. L. J. Balbach and Wendell K. Utah.

Foreign holding company held exempt from franchise tax where a number of its subsidiaries filed franchise tax returns. Plaintiff was a Delaware holding corporation, whose sole activities in Utah consisted in holding stockholders' meetings, at which reports were presented and directors elected, and directors' meetings at which matters connected with the control and management of affairs of its subsidiaries were considered. Plaintiff's subsidiaries consisted of both Utah and foreign corporations. It claimed exemption from the Utah franchise tax under section 80-13-5 (16), exempting "corporations whose sole business consists of holding the stock of other corporations for the purpose of controlling the management of affairs of such other corporations, if such other corporations make returns under this chapter." The defendant Tax Commission had levied a tax upon plaintiff because all of the plaintiff's subsidiaries did not make returns under the provisions of the Utah franchise tax law. The Utah Supreme Court set the levy aside, saying: "We are of the opinion that the Tax Commission in exacting the tax misinterpreted or misapplied the statute. The evident meaning and purpose of the statute is to exempt holding corporations, 'if such other taxable corporations make returns under this chapter' as required. Sec. 80-13-5 (16) supra, exempts the plaintiff corporation from the tax imposed. If the plaintiff corporation were not exempted under the exempting clause referred to, still the statute, as applied and interpreted by the Commission, would be discriminatory and would deprive plaintiff of property without due process of law. One holding corporation holding only control-stock of Utah corporations making returns would be exempt under the construction made by the Tax Commission, while a similar corporation holding both domestic and foreign stock would not be exempt." First Security Corporation of Ogden v. The State Tax Commission of Utah, 63 P. (2d) 1062. Thatcher & Young of Ogden, for plaintiff. Ned Warnock of Salt Lake City, for defendant.

Regulations and Rulings

ALBERTA—An Order-in-Council recently issued provides that shares without par value are to be taken at $1 per share for the purpose of the Corporations Tax Act, unless a maximum price or consideration for which such shares shall be issued is stated in the Letters Patent, Memorandum or Articles, in which case such maximum price or consideration is used.

ALABAMA—A domestic corporation, which has paid a fee upon a prior increase of capital stock, reduced the amount of its capital stock, and then increased the same, but not to an amount as great as the prior increase. Under these circumstances, the Attorney General of Alabama ruled that a tax must be paid upon the latest increase. Full text of opinion is shown in the Alabama Corporation Tax (CT) Service, page 503.)

CALIFORNIA—A foreign corporation doing an investigation business in California through the agency of another foreign corporation, which is properly licensed as a detective agency by the State, must also be licensed as a detective agency in the opinion of the California Attorney General, as reported in full at page 571-107 of the California CT Service.

The Attorney General has also ruled that interest paid on a Federal income tax is an allowable deduction under the California Bank and Franchise Tax Act. (California CT Service, page 235-99.)

COLORADO—The Colorado use tax, as applied to the storage, use or consumption of tangible personal property brought into the state by a non-resident, is not, in the opinion of the Attorney General, discriminatory and violative of the "commerce clause," since it is supplementary to the retail sales tax law, which imposes a like tax on the sale of like goods in the state. (Opinion in full text in the Colorado CT Service, page 7606.)

FLORIDA—A corporation organized under the law prior to 1925, which reincorporated under the 1925 law and changed its charter provisions, must pay a reincorporation fee. (Attorney General's opinion, reported in Florida CT Service, page 154.)

MICHIGAN—An editorial comment upon a recent meeting of the State Board of Tax Administration which determined bunker coal, certain sales by vending machines, and garment hangers given away by dry cleaners, to be exempt from the Sales Tax, as well as holding the operation of ore mining and crude oil recovery to be industrial processing, is printed in the Michigan CT Service, page 575-73. On the same page mention is made of another meeting of the Board at which it was held that milk bottles are used in the industrial processing of milk and their sale is therefore exempt from the sales tax.

MONTANA—The State Board of Equalization has ruled that Federal income taxes and Montana corporation license taxes may be deducted only in the year in which paid. The deduction of a reasonable addition to bad debt reserve is allowed if such deduction is approved and allowed in the Federal return. (Montana CT Service, page 1555.)
